According to the IRS, "Just about everyone has to file an income tax return, except for people with relatively small incomes. The amount of income you can earn without having to file a return is determined by your filing status, whether you are a dependent on someone else's return, and if you have reached age 65."

For 2008, you must file a return if your gross income is above the following limits.

- Single $8,950
- Head of Household $11,500
- Married Filing Jointly $17,900
- Qualifying Widow (er) $14,400
- Married Filing Separately $3,500
